

Want to Be the Coolest Baby on the Block? Do it With Designer Baby Clothes

Designer baby clothes are all the rage. You read about them in magazines, see photos of them on celebrity websites, and may even know of stores and boutiques that carry lines of them. Of course, not everyone dresses their baby in designer baby clothes. The kind of clothes you dress your baby in depends largely on your income, and how affordable the designer baby clothes may be. There's also personal tastes and preferences to take into account. Just because an article of baby clothing falls under the category of designer baby clothing doesn't necessarily mean that it's nice to look at, or is made of good material, or even fits your baby well. So, who does indulge in designer baby clothing? Most likely the type of parent who wants to go above and beyond to make sure that their baby stands out.

Celebrity parents and well-to-do parents are the most common shopper for designer baby clothes. The industry for designer baby clothes is well established, with names and logos being easily recognized. There are many fabulous outfits and ensembles available in the designer baby clothing line, even though the clothes are expensive and babies will outgrow them as quickly as they would outgrow an outfit from your local Target or Baby Gap store.

There are dozens of lines of designer baby clothing, but the more popular ones are Baby Dior and Baby Phat. Anne Geddes, the photographer famous for her precious photos of infants and babies, has her own designer baby clothing line as well. Baby Dior caters towards soft cotton body suits, while Baby Phat covers stylish, hip-hop style clothing sized from infancy through teenage years. The Anne Geddes line of designer baby clothing is heavily influenced by her love of nature and babies, but this should come as no surprise.

Sandbox Couture is the perfect choice for where to shop for high quality, genuine and unique designer baby clothes. Many celebrity mothers, including Madonna, Jennie Garth and Diane Farr clothe their own babies in the designer baby clothes that are found only at Sandbox Couture. Their collection of designer baby clothes covers infants, babies and toddlers, with plenty of styles and varieties for little boys, little girls, and their preferences on what's hot and what feels good.

About the Author

Kimberly Green is a hip mom with hip kids. You can find her children all dolled up in only to coolest designer baby clothes. For more in the freshest baby couture, including photos, details and stylish outfits to dress your baby in, check out SandboxCouture.com.

Source: <http://www.spivo.com/articles>